With its 'proper' air, bon-ton manner and bourgeois spirit, camel has always been a classic colour found in women's wardrobes. But this winter it is something much more: a cult colour to be worn without restrictions. Having been stripped of its traditional image, it has become warmer and bolder. This change in attitude makes one forget Ingrid Bergman or Lauren Bacall's twin sets and inspires one to take on the more fun and exciting style of Sienna Miller or Blake Lively. Full, full-bodied, lively and with a sensual twist that offers up the illusion of a 'nude' effect! And sporty bags and clutches to wear with decorated ballet flats, ankle boots and thigh-high boots with retro middle heels. Jewelry decorations, watches and accessories take on the hue to complete audacious, precious or sporty outfits. Coat-like pieces that drape over the body and puff out at the shoulders offer unexpected, sculptural shapes. They are worn with clutches featuring glittering details and oversized faceted bracelets and dangling necklaces. The details tell the tale with gloves decorated to look like tattoos and glasses studded with rhinestones to light up the face. Symbolic of the ultimate in seduction, lips are red but the palette runs the gamut from coral for day to fire-engine
